“A Quartet of Balboa Park Garden Makers”

Balboa Park landscape features created by John Morley, Richard Requa, Kate Sessions and Paul Thiene have not all survived, but the influence and inspiration of these creative, individualistic, stubborn and opportunistic garden makers live on in Balboa Park. Morley devoted 27 years to the Park, while Requa passed through like a fast-moving storm. Sessions employed a regional sensibility to her plant choices. Thiene looked for the showy and colorful. A collective look at the contributions of this tenacious foursome offers new perspectives on the design and greening of Balboa Park.

Nancy Carol Carter has published more than a dozen horticultural history articles in Eden, Pacific Horticulture, and the Journal of San Diego History. She is completing a study of landscape architect Paul Thiene and writes a regular column for California Garden.
