PRESIDENT’S MESSAGE

Cabrillo Bridge Lamps

Walk, ride, or drive across the Cabrillo Bridge and you can’t help but notice those recently restored lamps—thirty-one duplex lampposts installed in 1914 for the soon-to-open Panama-California Exposition. These are the only lampposts that remain in Balboa Park from the Exposition. Now fully restored, they remind us of the importance of preserving our Exposition heritage.

The Balboa Park Trust at the San Diego Foundation, the Friends of Balboa Park, and the Balboa Park Conservancy joined us, each group pledging $25,000, offering a $100,000 incentive for the City to undertake this long-overdue restoration.

Council Member Todd Gloria pledged $12,000. Casey Smith, then District Manager of Balboa Park Operations, took the restoration project under his wing. An additional $167,000 in City funds were needed—not including staff time, without whose efforts this project could not have succeeded. Our sincere thanks go to City staff and to our fellow non-profits, whose cooperative efforts brought about this wonderful restoration.

Palisades Restoration

Five years ago The Committee of One Hundred updated our Mission Statement to include the buildings, gardens, and public spaces of the Palisades area of Balboa Park, long an ugly stepsister to the El Prado area. Now we have embarked on our first effort to spur restoration in the Palisades. The following pages detail our plans and progress on the San Diego Automotive Museum Murals Project.

Save The Date for Annual Luncheon

May 26, 2017 at the Balboa Park Club

Guest speaker Nancy Carol Carter, author of several articles on Balboa Park, its landscape, and the people who created its gardens, will present “A Quartet of Balboa Park Garden Makers.”

This year, our 50th anniversary, we’ll honor three extraordinary leaders: Bea Evenson, Sam Hamill, and Pat DeMarce.

Mark your calendar and plan to attend. Membership is not required to attend the luncheon. Details will be posted on our website in late April. Invitations will be mailed to our members and donors.

Balboa Park's 1935 California State Building, now home to the San Diego Automotive Museum, was constructed for the 1935-1936 California Pacific International Exposition. The building was designed by Richard Requa, Director of Architecture for that Exposition. Requa wrote that the building "demonstrated the close relationship between the ancient Maya and the twentieth century modern treatment of masses and ornamentation, or a progression from ancient to modern." Maya-styled ornamentation can be seen today on the restored Federal Building, home to the Hall of Champions, across the Pan American Plaza (parking lot).

Short on time for designing and creating several new buildings and remodeling some of the 1915 buildings, Requa asked the Exposition’s art director and Hollywood set designer Juan Larrinaga for advice on creating the Maya designs on several buildings. Larrinaga suggested they make the ornamentation from fibre wallboard. Requa wrote that “All of our new decoration was done by this method, much of it designed, and all of it made under his [Larrinaga’s] supervision.”

The four large murals above the California State Building’s entrance were also the work of Larrinaga and his team. The murals represented California Commerce, Scenic Beauty, Agriculture and Industry. Each mural was 8 x 18 feet and painted on fibre board to look like tilework.

All the building’s original ornamentation, including the four murals, have been lost. The San Diego Automotive Museum and The Committee of One Hundred hope to see the entire building restored to its 1935 condition, using permanent materials.

After an extensive search of local and distant archives turned up no color photographs of the murals, The Committee of One Hundred commissioned tile artists to recreate the murals in color. Full-size temporary murals will be installed on the building as the first step in restoration of the entire building, including permanent tile murals.

Balboa Park. It began as the Ford Bowl, created for the 1935 California Pacific International Exposition, where it was home to twice-daily symphony concerts during the Exposition and for years afterward.

Disruption by jet airplanes increased and musical theater didn’t last. Unused for the past five years the Starlight Bowl deteriorated. Weeds grew large outdoors as an illicit indoor operation grew cannabis. Homeless people repeatedly broke into the building despite the efforts of Park Rangers.

Along came Save Starlight last year with vision, boundless energy, organizational skills and enthusiasm. Led by Steve Stopper, former audio technician for Starlight, and a team of volunteers, the non-profit group has held two major cleanups of the venue under the approving watch of Balboa Park staff. The City is considering what must be done to insure safety and access before re-opening the Bowl to the public.

The Committee of One Hundred wishes Save Starlight success in this important endeavor.

Saving Starlight

The Starlight Bowl, for many years home to the San Diego Civic Light Opera, is the venue where generations were entertained under the stars in Balboa Park.

Restore the Palisades

The Palisades area pleads for the attention it deserves as the core of our 1935 California Pacific International Exposition. By failing to maintain these once-proud historic buildings, the City of San Diego has allowed roofs to leak and damage collections; tree roots to damage floors and injure Park visitors; and ornamentation to go un-repaired while San Diego welcomes millions of tourists, and City and County residents to visit these buildings yearly. The City has completed a facilities assessment for each of these buildings. The City knows what needs to be done. It’s time for our City to get to work.
